Arthur | Marshall Physician Search Sees 32% Growth in 2010

Demand Grows Faster than Average

Irving, TX - Arthur | Marshall, Inc., one of the industry's leading experts in physician recruitment and staffing, released its projected 2010 results indicating significant growth for the year. The increase is directly related to meeting the rising demand for quality physicians across the nation.

"The Arthur | Marshall team works above and beyond to find the ideal physicians to meet clients' needs in hospitals and clinics across the country" said Curtis Pryor, CEO of Arthur | Marshall. "The reward is a substantial increase in successful placements during a time when many in the industry are struggling."

The nation's growing physician shortage is projected to increase 22 percent between 2008 and 2018 according to the United States Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The Bureau's Employment Handbook for 2010-2011 indicates that "physician and surgeon demand will grow much faster than the average. Job growth will occur because of continued expansion of healthcare-related industries. The growing and aging population will drive overall growth in the demand for physician services..."

"Based on our results, the trend for primary care physicians remains one of the areas of greatest need for our clients. Primary care physicians, particularly those in family practice, internal medicine, and pediatrics are a key focus for Arthur | Marshall's clients," Mr. Pryor stated. Arthur | Marshall is also seeing an increased demand for psychiatrists. A recent study indicates more than fifty percent of current psychiatrists are over the age of 50 and are moving closer to retirement. The same study also indicates a shortage of graduating residents to fill the growing number of vacancies. "We anticipate this to be an area of constant need for hospitals and clinics in the future and are aggressively increasing staff to meet the demand,” said Mr. Pryor.
